Let's Celebrate!

February is Black History Month! Its start was in 1926 as a week set aside to honor African-American contributions to American history. Every U.S. President since 1976 has officially designated February as Black History Month. Other countries around the world, including Canada and the United Kingdom, have followed the United States' lead and devoted a month to celebrating black history.

Black history, like all history, isn't just about dates and facts; it's about people making a difference in each other's lives. This month, fourth graders will devote computer lab time researching famous African Americans and their contributions to the world, and especially to the U.S.A.
