What Kids Learn in Fourth Grade

Where reading is concerned, my goal is to keep children reading. This means making use of school and community resources, referring the children to new books, talking about books, and reading to the children from ever-more-complex works.

Some schools organize their language arts curriculum around American literature in fourth and fifth grades. At St. Francis, we believe it is more important to keep children reading many different kinds of literature than to concentrate on a particular country, genre, or period. Children need to know that a very large world is available to them! Please check this class page for current reading assignments and more information about your child's class.

Mastery of multiplication is critical for all students in grade four. Bookmark the following web site for easy access to multiplication drills and tests: www.math-drills.com

(Thanks for reading this far! If you tell your child to give me this special phrase... "St. Francis" he/she will receive 5 Stars!!)
